Course overview

In today's unpredictable world, many high-performing companies are unknowingly laying the groundwork for future failure. Why? Because traditional strategies, designed for stable business contexts, don't hold up in volatile, complex and fast-moving environments.

Even fundamentally sound businesses can collapse when they mistake uncertainty for risk. This training course reveals how to reframe strategy for resilience and growth in turbulent times.

The expert speaker will cover:

- Why traditional financial models undermine long-term viability
- The difference between unlucky and lucky uncertainty—and how to benefit from both
- Moving from extractive to fiduciary business models (George Kinder's "FIAT" approach)
- Designing financial systems that sustain innovation and adaptability
- Alternative capital strategies: shared risk models, fractional profit pooling, and ecosystem investments
- Tools you can use now: Key indicators to assess whether your strategy builds resilience or exposes fragility
